The market metric to focus on in 2022 was the surprising restraint of new supply coming into the market. Listing inventory fell sharply from the prior quarter to reach pre-pandemic levels, despite sales and prices remaining higher than in the same period in 2019. Lower affordability through higher rates and housing prices has cooled demand. However, earlier refinances and purchases made during the pandemic era have kept would-be sellers wedded to their much lower mortgage rates. There were 6,523 listings at the end of the fourth quarter, 5.1% higher than the prior year's quarter but 15.7% below the preceding quarter and only 1.8% below the same period in 2019. The limited amount of change to listing inventory despite the 28.5% annual decline in sales defined the fourth quarter market. The 2,546 sales total was 6.5% below the fourth quarter decade average, indicating the sharp sales decline was more about a return to more normalized conditions after the historic and unsustainable boom of 2021. The months of supply, the number of months to sell all listing inventory at the current sales rate, was 7.7 months, 48.1% slower than the prior-year quarter but 7.2% faster than the same period in 2019. The twenty-year quarterly average for months of supply was 8.5 months, or 9.4% slower than current conditions. The median sales price was $1,100,500, down 5.5% year over year and the first such decline since the beginning of the pandemic era in the second quarter of 2020. The price trend indicator was 10.2% above the pre-pandemic level and was the seventh consecutive quarter above the $1.1 million threshold. Downward pressure on price direction in the coming quarters is anticipated to be modest, given the limited gains in listing inventory. Average sales price followed a similar pattern, slipping 0.4% from the prior-year quarter to $1,940,565, but 6.9% higher than pre-pandemic levels. The average price per square foot increased yearly compared to the other two price trend indicators, up 5.3% to $1,662. A key reason for this disparity in performance was that the average square footage of a sale fell to 1,168 square feet, the lowest of the pandemic era. This decline in sales size indicated that the shift to larger-sized sales during the pandemic has ended, being only 1.7% higher than in the same period in 2019. The majority of the sales size change occurred within the new development market, with a 9.4% yearly decline to 1,320 square feet, 5.8% below the pre-pandemic level. The market share of new development sales remained relatively steady at 15.9% compared to 16.7% in the prior year but somewhat higher than the 12.9% in the fourth quarter of 2019. The luxury market, defined as the top ten percent of all sales in a period, continued to see rising prices and a modest increase in listing inventory. All price trend indicators rose annually and were higher than pre-pandemic levels. The starting point for the luxury market was $3,950,000, unchanged from the prior-year quarter but 21.9% above the pre-pandemic level. Luxury listing inventory increased 7.9% to 1,459 but was 19.6% below pre-pandemic levels. For the first time in the seven quarters this metric has been tracked, the average listing price was adjusted downward during its market period for an average of 8.7%. The market share of cash buyers reached a record 55.2%, the highest in nine years of tracking, reflecting the high mortgage rate environment. The bidding war market share was 7.5%, down from 9.2% in the same period last year. The result was a fraction of the 31% record share in the third quarter of 2015. The average monthly maintenance for a co-op sale was $2,532 or $2.44 per square foot, up 0.5% annually, while the average condo common charge plus real estate tax total was $3,876 or $2.92 per square foot, down 1.7% annually, despite significant inflationary pressures.
